THIRTY-SEVENTH REPORT ON THE
DISTRICT, CRIMINAL, AND
PRIVATE LUNATIC ASYLUMS
IN IRELAND.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY CHARLES STUART VANE TEMPEST, MARQUIS OF LONDONDERRY.

LORD LIEUTENANT-GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND.

Dublin Castle, June 9, 1888.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We have the honour to submit to your Excellency for presentation to Parliament, this the Thirty-seventh Annual Report on the Department entrusted to our supervision and control. Acting sedulously in accordance with the manifold Lunacy Acts now in operation, as well as on Orders in Council, we are enabled to state that district asylums for the insane have been satisfactorily conducted during the past twelvemonth.

To deal at any length with a constantly recurring subject at the termination of every succeeding year, and at the same time avoid frequent repetitions, is no easy undertaking, and particularly in regard to institutions where a systematized organization has long existed. At best a comparison only between statistics and the results of management from one definite period to another can be afforded.

On the 1st of January, 1887, the total number of individuals registered as insane in Ireland of all classes, and under every form of mental disease, amounted to 14,702, while at the close of the year it had reached 15,263, being 561 in excess. Of the above aggregates there were respectively as to date in public asylums 10,077 and 10,499, or 422 more on the 31st December last. In poor houses similarly there were 3,841 and 3,961, showing an increase of 120. In private asylums the number relatively stood at 602 and 625, being also an addition of 23. On the other hand there were decreases at the Criminal asylum, 172 as against 169, or 3; and in Government patients at Palmerston 9 and 8, of one. In gaols at each date one person alone was to be found.

From the foregoing data it would appear that a general increase of 561 lunatics took place within the year, one considerably more than in any previous like period.

The normal proportion of the insane as regards the population of England and Ireland, if judged of by statistical returns, might be fairly accepted on an average as nearly identical up to the beginning of the present decade, at 2.80 per thousand; but as during the past ten years in the tide of emigration from this country not only the physically infirm, but still more the mentally affected, were for the most part left behind, to find a home in the workhouse, or an asylum, any pre-existing analogy between the two countries in a lunatic point of view must be materially decreased. In 1878 no less than 82,000 of its inhabitants emigrated—leaving at least, among the agricultural and humble community, the probable residuum of two hundred insane. Hence with us the apparent, though not an actual increase of lunacy has arisen, and what under any circumstances must be observable for a certain time in the present generation, even apart from the effects of emigration above shadowed out. In recent years likewise natives of this country who spent a good portion of their life industriously abroad, on becoming insane are relegated back, as instanced last year at Queenstown, at which five patients from America were disembarked on one occasion.

Adverting to admissions into district asylums during the past year numbering 2,368—1,558 males and 1,305 females, they constituted, with the previous population in them, a total of 12,940 under treatment—of them it appears that no less than 620 were relapsed cases, some for a fourth and even a fifth time, and not a few at regular intervals—facts indicative of the recurrence of mental disease, and at the same time of the watchfulness that ought to be employed against causes of excitement.

With reference to the modes of admission, in former reports we pointed out certain irregularities in the committing of dangerous lunatics, but which, owing to official circulars addressed to Magistrates, have since materially decreased. No less, however, than 1,891 were received into district asylums last year, under the 30 & 31 Vic. cap. 118, the remaining admissions being by order of the Lord Lieutenant, 76; with the sanction of the governors, 842, and on the authority of the Inspectors, 28, of which latter 15 were soldiers, who, becoming insane when on active service, were temporarily taken in at the ordinary cost of maintenance.

The sparse population of some counties, with a marked decrease of resident gentry in them, no doubt must largely interfere with facilities which elsewhere exist for a more regular mode of admission through local boards; as contrasted with previous years, there were, for example, nearly double the number of dangerous lunatics committed from three of them in 1887.

We would further observe in regard to magisterial transferences to institutions for the insane, that considerable disadvantages still exist from the manner in which they have been effected, as it frequently happens that little or no information whatever is afforded of antecedents so as to modify an after treatment. The statute 30 & 31 Vic., cap. 118, being based on the fact, that "persons apprehended under circumstances denoting a derangement of mind and a purpose of committing some crime for which, if committed, they would be liable to be indicted," it only remains for "the committing justices to call in a dispensary medical officer to certify to their lunacy," although he may have never seen, or even heard of, the individuals till summoned before the Bench.

We shall now submit for your Excellency's information general statistical results in regard to the operation of the twenty-two public or district asylums of this country. Without entering into details connected with each, we are enabled to state that they have been collected with scrupulous accuracy in all their bearings and as such are furnished in the appendices.

The total under treatment last year, as already observed, was 12,940, composed of 7,051 males, 5,889 females. Of this number 1,582, between both sexes, were discharged, 1,123 as recovered, 375 relieved, and 84 not improved. The mortality amounted to 837, while two only effected their escape; thus, during the year 1887, 2,441 were disposed of.

On analysing the causes of insanity during the past, as indeed in former years, we find the physical predominate to a marked degree among men, and the moral with women, and in reference to age in the primary cases, when the mind is strongest and most occupied between the decades from manhood to forty-five. The returns before us point out a greater liability in that interval than in any other like period, and equally so among the poor and humble as the wealthy and exalted.

With respect to the curative and beneficial results of treatment in 1887, the former if contrasted with admissions alone would present a gratifying aspect, being close on 40 per cent., but from our point of view a deduction not sufficiently precise, as they were not altogether derivable from admissions, though largely so. On the average under treatment, the cures would stand at about 11 per cent., and on a similar reference the improved at nearly 4 per cent. We are at all events quite content to be on a full equality with our neighbours no matter on what grounds favourable calculations may be made.

In regard to the relative proportion of the probably curable to the incurable, although much more fortunately circumstanced than elsewhere, we still regret to state that they stand in the ratio of 1,880 of the former to 8,619 of the latter, in which are included 827, between epileptics, lunatics, and idiots. While in over 500 cases, out of the total, heredity is traceable in a nearer or more remote degree.

Of the 84 discharged unimproved, and for the most part taken away by their friends, not a few were so removed that they might die at home—both as a satisfaction to the patients themselves when at all sane, and from family pride on the part of relatives.

With respect to mortality, not quite 7 per cent. on the total treated, little or no difference is perceptible in district asylums during the last three years. Out of 857 deaths which occurred in '87, the cause was referable in 326 to pulmonary affections, in 234 to cerebral, in 94 to abdominal, and in 148 to old age. The difference was owing to other ordinary maladies but principally of a febrile character. Two patients committed suicide, comparatively speaking with what obtains in asylums generally a very small number upon a daily average of 10,263 patients during the whole year; in each case a coroner's inquest was held resulting in a full exculpation of the attendants in charge. Strange to say the deceased never exhibited discontent or a disposition to violence. Two males effected their escape, who at the time were convalescent, and returned to their native localities.

Deducting from the aggregate under treatment as already detailed, the diminution arising from discharges, deaths, and escapes, there remained in district lunatic asylums on 31st December, 1887, 10,499—5,734 males and 4,765 females—showing an increase of 422 at the close of the twelvemonth under consideration.

EXPENDITURE.

The next subject of lunatic administration to which we shall advert is Expenditure, which presents itself under two headings. The first is connected with the erection and establishment generally of district asylums, the purchase of land, furniture, &c., &c., and pertains more immediately to the board of control, constituted of the three Commissioners of Public Works and the two Inspectors—the five being joint trustees to the property of these institutions. The statutory outlay hitherto sanctioned by this branch of the department since 1830, has amounted to close on a million and a half. As in our last parliamentary report we referred to the then outstanding liabilities—£219,582 in process of annual repayment, we have now simply to observe that the debt since then has been regularly and in due proportion liquidated by the different districts named in Appendix G of the Report of 1886.

With regard to the current cost of maintenance, the following statement will afford a general information, the details of which are exhibited in tabular forms, to be found in the Appendix.

On the 1st of January, 1887, exclusive of a balance in hand of £46,159 1s., the total receipts to credit during the year amounted to £216,186 17s. 11d. thus derived—from the Government rate in aid, £101,800; from local taxation, £104,332 9s. 3d.; from paying patients, £4,956 13s. 7d.; from unrequired farm produce sold, £2,222 11s. 7d., the difference being made up by various minor sums as entered in the receipt and expenditure tables.

The total maintenance cost of our twenty-two public asylums, all items included, during the twelvemonth was £217,217 4s. 4d. comprised under special headings, of which the principal were provisions, salaries and wages, fuel, light, clothing, bedding, repairs, furniture, &c., as also given in a tabulated form.

The capitation cost, one institution with another, on the daily average of inmates in them throughout the year amounted to £21 3s. 6d. of which, as £10 8s. was obtained through the rate in aid, a payment of £10 15s. 6d., being 2s. less than in 1886, devolved on the country at large.

We should, however, observe that no uniform expenditure obtains throughout all asylums, as owing to incidental and other causes in continuous operation, not only in different districts, but even in the same at different periods, a marked disparity is not unfrequently noticeable, one varying, as the case may be, from five to twelve or fourteen per cent, be it from repairs or alterations, refurnishing, machinery, a rise or fall in contract prices, and the like.

Apart from them, however, a more liberal appreciation of the object of "the rate in aid grant" is entertained by some Boards of Governors than by others, and thereby more comforts bestowed on households generally through its administration.

We have never withheld our opinion that the rate in aid should be what in words it professes, an alleviation to local taxes, and not when the latter are less than it, be converted into the principal means of support. Be it, however, as it may, one fact is certain, that the moneys spent in the support of district asylums in this country have been accounted for, it may be fairly said, with an unerring correctness, as testified to our office in the reports of the Government auditors, whose powers of inquiry are unlimited. Last audit the only item questioned in an expenditure of £212,740 12s. 8d., was a sum of £2 6s. 8d. which was owing to a mistake and was at once rectified. Having to prepare estimates for the Government grant annually in advance, as well as for the levying of local taxation throughout the country during the year, through Grand Jury precepts, as well as the examination and approval of asylum contracts, we have the opportunity, at least, of being fully informed on fiscal business.

As not altogether out of place in connexion with expenditure, and the watchfulness with which it has been regarded, we would here observe that having occasion some months back to report on the fiscal management of the Richmond or Metropolitan Asylum, during the present system of audit, and we found that on a total outlay of £524,640 not one farthing had been directly or indirectly questioned, and that within the same period, taking the certified returns of maintenance of our District Asylums, as reported to us after each individual audit, and amounting in the aggregate to £3,466,000, a sum of forty pounds had not been lost to the country at large.

We would now, and perhaps not inappropriately, as bearing on the lunacy department, make some general observations in regard to the preceding statistical epitome. It would appear that the current maintenance cost of district or public asylums is borne by the Government and the country, in not very unequal proportions, the difference on an average of five years not exceeding eight per cent., as between the Treasury Grant on the one hand and local taxation on the other, the excess falling on the latter. The rate in aid or Treasury Grant dates its full operation from 1876. In the previous year the amount raised by a taxation which pressed more heavily on the agricultural community in both countries than on any other, was, in Ireland, £190,000 for lunacy maintenance. There were then 7,741 insane poor located in our asylums, while in 1887, with 2,758 more patients in them, much better domiciled, and in every way better looked after, they cost the country little over half that sum. Thus during the past eleven years, lunatic expenditure, with increased comforts to the most afflicted members of society, has practically been diminished by fully sixty per cent. per head. We are thus particular in noticing the preceding fact for the purpose of obviating a popular misapprehension, that the support of the insane poor, simply as such, entails a far heavier impost on local rates than it actually does. The reverse obtains, for were the 12,940 asylum inmates last year, simply so many paupers in a workhouse, as otherwise they probably would have been from destitution or inability to work, they would not average probably thirty-two shillings less, than the bona fide insane under regular treatment. In other words, the difference both in residence and of maintenance, does not seemingly affect an increase of taxation to the extent of £19,000 on the whole rateable property of the Kingdom, or about a farthing in the pound.

No doubt the outlay on the establishment of District Asylums since the enactment of the 1 & 2 G. IV., cap. 33, so far back as 1826, a statute still in force, has up to the present amounted to about a million and a-half, and which from being now nearly liquidated, is so far a question essentially of the past, but nevertheless one beneficial in every respect to many future generations. In some few districts, large supplementary accommodation may be required, as just now in the Belfast, Cork, and Mullingar, but elsewhere to a comparatively insignificant extent.

As in a preceding portion of the present Report, we adverted to the marked regularity with which District Asylum Accounts have been kept any further reference is unnecessary.

Connected, however, with it, though indirectly, there is a question which we venture to bring under the notice of your Excellency. The Government subsidy last year was £101,800; while salaries and wages amounted to £49,160, and superannuations to £3,314 15s.—between both, £52,474 15s., leaving a difference of £49,326 5s. for general maintenance, as would be the case out of any other equivalent sum no matter whence obtained.

The only appointment which the Executive retains is that of Medical Superintendent in each of the twenty-two asylums. The proposal, or perhaps more respectfully speaking, the suggestion we would now make, and for the good, as it appears to us, of the department, is that all staff payments should in future be met from the rate in aid, and specially debited to it, inasmuch as their amount is primarily fixed by the Lord Lieutenant in Council and can be increased only in like manner. We are further disposed to think that besides resident physicians there are other asylum officers who should be directly appointed by the Executive, so as to secure a more efficient and uniform selection, and be incorporated as members of the ordinary Civil Service.

In other countries, taking America for example, so progressive in its apprehension as to lunatic requirements, its public institutions for the insane in all its divisions and dependencies, are designated by their practical and true name, "State Asylums," and which for social reasons in regard to communities at large, and for individuals, on personal grounds, are placed under a special department, and controlled by each separate legislature.

As pertaining to this subject, we have to report that the supply of provisions has on the whole been satisfactorily carried out, very few complaints being transmitted to us, or any desire on the part of Boards for our interference to supersede contracts. The reverse would rather appear, as we were occasionally solicited by contractors to annul them, from unexpected contingencies. Cereal food, such as bread and oatmeal, the latter much used, has been uniformly of good quality, as also milk, an article of very large consumption. Groceries were obtained on reasonable terms and of fair quality. With reference to animal food, prices varied much in different localities, even from thirty to forty per cent.; hence no uniform standard can be established in its regard when in some places it cost only 4d. or 4½d., and in others from 5d. to 6½d. a lb. This deviation necessarily caused a very marked difference in several institutions on maintenance outlay, particularly in those where a more liberal dietary was allowed.

With regard to textile fabrics—bedding linen and such like—they are also purchased by contract; for them there is generally much competition, so a fair and economical selection can be made. Home manufactured frieze, a lasting and very suitable material for men's wearing apparel, is almost solely obtained. Coals relatively to all other domestic articles largely consumed, and in the absence of Irish Coal Mines, comparatively with what obtains in England, is a heavy item of expense in our District Asylums.

ACCOMMODATION.

The general accommodation afforded in Irish Public Asylums, collectively speaking, is on the whole satisfactory, particularly in regard to dormitories, which are airy and maintained with a marked cleanliness, while the bedding in them is uniformly good, ample, and well kept. Although the cubic area for each patient in some of them is from five to ten or even twenty per cent. below the normal allowance, still from the attention paid by Resident Medical Superintendents to increased means of ventilation, the deficiency is largely obviated. Not so, however, with respect to an adequate day room provision, due in part from the fact that primitive day rooms have occasionally been converted to sleeping purposes from an influx of urgent admissions. Thus an overcrowding supervenes, and with it a most unsatisfactory classification. Where patients labouring under different phases of mental derangement—be they tranquil or violent, harmless or suicidal—are so closely associated, it has been our unceasing endeavour, even at the charge of being extravagantly disposed, to meet not only obvious requirements but at the same time to establish cheerful and comfortable surroundings. In the domestic arrangements, particularly of the old asylums now sixty years in existence, there is much to be remedied, as the lunatic population in some of them is now more than treble the original number for which they had been intended, we refer to kitchens, laundries, stores, out-offices, and the like. Even in structures of a later date and occupied within the past five and twenty years many inconveniences have arisen from their unexpected and over-repletion.

DOMESTIC ORGANIZATION.

As specially bearing on domestic organization, it is gratifying to us to state, both from our own observation, but still more from the reports of Medical Superintendents to us, on our quarterly inspections, that as a general rule, the subordinate staffs in District Asylums perform their duties collectively with zeal and assiduity, but above all with a forbearance and kindness of demeanour towards the Insane, very many of whom, it must be added, are frequently irritable, and most difficult of management. Few positions, if even there be any, are less enviable than of those who have to keep constant watch over the mentally deranged, even within their own immediate family circle, and none more tried from the nature of the obligations at all hours imposed on them. "If the labourer be worthy of his hire" a deserving attendant in a Lunatic Asylum should be included in the category. Latterly, assuming all to be alike disposed, we are getting a more intelligent class of indoor servants from the encouragement of better wages. In a community, however, of over nine hundred domestics occasional irregularities cannot but occur. Dismissals or resignations amounted last year to seventeen, and not from any serious offence, save in one instance, which though perhaps not an indictable crime constituted a gross immorality. The Engine Master at the Mullingar Asylum intrigued with a female patient, who subsequently gave birth to a child. He emigrated before any action could be taken, even if one was open for his punishment.

OCCUPATION.

Looking to the peculiar and uncertain character of the insane as a body, employment of one kind or another is far from being neglected in district asylums. Within doors a considerable portion of the females are industriously and continuously employed in ordinary household avocations, and in needle as well as fancy work, at which some are very expert. Among the men also there is no great dearth of in-door employment, as each institution, to a greater or less degree, has ordinary workshops for tailors, shoemakers, carpenters, painters, &c. Basket and furniture making is now being introduced.

As the great majority of the male patients belong to the agricultural community, much is done by them on the farms, which have turned out highly remunerative, with an average gain of £4 10s. per acre, from the unpaid labour expended on their cultivation. On the whole, unfortunately, the land attached to asylums is not sufficiently extensive, so as to supply them with a larger produce, but especially of milk, than which no nutriment is more suited for the insane.

AMUSEMENTS.

Amusements are now being very liberally provided in most District Asylums, and fully recognised by local boards, not only as productive of beneficial results in a curative point of view, but still more as a certain alleviation to the unhappiness of a no inconsiderable portion of their inmates, who sadly feel the deprivation of their liberty. Even with the sane and free a monotonous existence passes heavily. It is gratifying to us to state, that although in some few of our public institutions little progress in regard to pastimes and out-door amusements has as yet been made, the reverse is observable in many, from the assiduous attention bestowed upon their establishment by the Resident Medical Superintendents. In some asylums excellent bands are to be found, music encouraged, excursions into the country permitted, weekly or more frequent re-unions in large halls, &c., &c. The benefits of which are noticeable even in uniting patients and attendants more socially with each other.

To effect such objects we regard the Government rate to be intended as an adjunct in behalf of individuals who are deprived of liberty not as prisoners, but for their own safety.

BOARDS OF GOVERNORS.

Boards of Governors to Public Asylums in Ireland, and whose members for the last sixty years have been appointed by successive Lord Lieutenants in Council, meet monthly for the discharge of business at their respective Institutions, or oftener when specially required. The Metropolitan Board is however so far an exception as it assembles twice in the month. As some of these Governors scarcely ever attended from age, distance, indifference, or other reasons, the fact being brought under the notice of the Executive, your Excellency was pleased to direct a revision of names. This was done, and a large number of them was erased, and fresh appointments made from the gentry and educated body of society, an arrangement that, in our opinion, leaves nothing to be desired, as ensuring the same considerate, tranquil, and successful system of management that has been hitherto uniformly sustained without offence to any class of the population, in a spirit of benevolence towards the Insane Poor, and with a due regard to economy.

CHAPLAINS.

Before concluding our general observations on the Lunatic Department of Ireland, so far as District Asylums are concerned, we must bear testimony to the successful operation of a chaplaincy system as adopted in them especially within the present generation.

The three principal religious denominations are now fully recognised and the ministrations of clergymen belonging to each faith unreservedly afforded. Many of the Institutions have special Catholic chapels, some also have them for Protestant and Presbyterian worship, with above all the gratifying result that a cordial and unbiassed relationship, in which the distinctive forms of religion are unknown, animates the three alike.

In some large Asylums, as the Richmond and Cork, there are separate places of worship on the grounds for Roman Catholic congregations as well as for members conjointly of the Protestant and Presbyterian Churches. In most of those situated in the southern provinces, where Roman Catholics very largely preponderate, handsome and commodious chapels have been constructed for their immediate use. Elsewhere some large apartments are employed in common for all persuasions, but on the whole we are disposed to think that for religious observances, recreation and dining halls do not constitute the most appropriate localities.

DISTRICT ASYLUMS.

Taking the District Institutions of Ireland in alphabetical sequence, we shall now briefly advert to them as regards the year under consideration, omitting details which are to be found in the appendices of the present Report and more fully afforded by resident Medical Superintendents to their respective boards, and to local authorities.

ARMAGH ASYLUM.

The population, to the wants of which this asylum administers, and belonging to the county and city of the same name, amounts to 165,000, the annual rateable valuation of both being £408,000. The average number of patients in it during the past year was 280, between both sexes, and their cost of maintenance, £6,406 9s. 2d., deducting from which the Government capitation grant of £10 8s., the charge on the district for the time was reduced to £3,740, or as nearly as possible to eight farthings in the pound. The Institution, opened in 1832, has been recently enlarged by 160 beds, and otherwise materially improved, twenty acres having been added to the original estate—now 46. The recent construction includes a dining and recreation hall, chapel, airy day-rooms, laundries, stores, etc., etc., while a full supply of water is forced into a lofty tower just completed which commands the buildings. The cost, inclusive of land, is estimated at £25,000, repayable by twenty-eight semi-annual Grand Jury presentments. The condition of the establishment has been, making due allowance for over pressure on it, uniformly commendable.

BALLINASLOE ASYLUM.

This asylum, also one of the primitive, was first occupied in 1833. It then afforded accommodation for 150 beds. The Province of Connaught, containing over a million four hundred thousand inhabitants, constituted the district. Withal for over two years the establishment did not fill, such was the popular dislike to the name of a "madhouse." There are at present three District Asylums in the same province, with a population between them of 1,400 inmates, while the inhabitants have declined to 756,000. The most remote portions of the district in 33 averaged a hundred and forty miles, and as the only mode of conveyance to the asylum was on common cars with solid wooden wheels, scarcely two feet in diameter, and over bad and mountainous roads, it took seven or eight days to perform a journey now for a similar object effected in a sixth of the time.

At present the Ballinasloe Asylum belongs to the Counties of Galway and Roscommon, having an area of over two million acres, with a population of 374,000, and a rateable valuation of £769,000 a year. The average number of inmates amounted to 630 throughout last year. The male divisions were over-crowded, but as an addition of 120 beds with necessary requisites is now completed, there will be, we trust, an ample supply for the wants of the district. The expenditure in '87 was £11,927, which, minus the Government rate in aid, entailed a local levy of £7 11s. 2d. per head on the two counties, or three halfpence in the pound.

The site of the buildings is on an alluvial but recently well-drained flat of forty-seven acres. They are well supplied with water which passes through percolating tanks from a boundary river. Scarcely any coal is used, turf constituting all ordinary fuel—collected in the Autumn months into large and well-formed pyramids close to the out-offices. It affords excellent and cheerful firing, but is fully as expensive as coal, from the large quantity consumed. The patients are essentially of the farming community, and almost all Roman Catholics. There is a large and tastefully constructed chapel on the grounds. The Institution is of an unpretending character, and most satisfactorily conducted.

BELFAST ASYLUM.

The Belfast district comprises the county of Antrim, the borough of Belfast, and the town county of Carriekfergus, with a general population of 629,000, and an annual valuation of £1,282,587. The patients chargeable to the asylum at the close of 1887 numbered 627, of whom 87 were located in the Ballymena workhouse under the 38 and 39 Vic. c. 67.

The institution proper is now overcrowded by eighty, with a constant increase of applicants for admission. The Governors are desirous to meet requirements, but have not as yet arrived at any definite resolution, plans at one time being approved of and subsequently abandoned—whether by enlargements on the one hand, or, on the other, by erecting a commodious and auxiliary institution elsewhere.

The Inspectors, from a personal experience of the failure of half measures, have urged on the Board at local meetings and by letter, the expediency of a new structure altogether, as, in their opinion, the present buildings—much restricted as they are in regard to actual wants from a dearth of space, as well as of ordinary appliances, for the proper treatment of lunatics—cannot be satisfactorily and sufficiently increased.

Unlike almost all other districts in Ireland, that of Belfast rapidly advances in population—the borough alone within the past decade by 36,000, and in property by £120,000 a year. We were happy to find that at a recent meeting a resolution was passed to advertise for a hundred acres of land, or more if procurable, as a site. So far this is hopeful if adhered to; one fact is thereby conceded, that a considerable provision for the insane poor of the district is recognized at home. There are 87 patients supported in a poor-house and paid for by the Board at a rate fully equal to that in the asylum, which latter is overcrowded between dormitories and day rooms by one hundred and fifty inmates. There are no suitable lavatories, no dining or recreation halls of adequate dimensions, no chapel; the laundries are too small, as well as store rooms. Assuming, for example sake, that a new asylum were to cost fifty thousand pounds, interest for loan included, and taking into account the existing valuation of the district at large, if payable in twenty years by half-yearly levies, it would be annually at the rate of a farthing four-fifths in the year. If the period was extended to thirty years little over a farthing and an eighth, at the expiration of which time the whole outlay would be cleared off. The cost per head on local taxation for asylum lunatics in 1887 was a penny farthing in the £. Were they domiciled in a poorhouse as ordinary paupers, the difference would be scarcely noticeable.

CARLOW ASYLUM.

The Carlow Asylum, belonging to the counties of Kildare and Carlow, with a population of 122,300, and a conjoint rateable valuation of £504,076 a year, is adequate to existing requirements. The average cost per head of its inmates, 301, deducting from it the rate in aid, was in 1887, £10 18s. 10d., equivalent to a fraction over three halfpence in the pound on local taxation.

Dysentery of a rather fatal character was prevalent in it, and as in many other localities, a dearth of water was much felt in the autumn. No town in Ireland suffered more from cholera in 1849 than Carlow, owing to the above cause.

It is now proposed to have the town supplied from reservoirs on an adjacent range of hills. If the scheme is carried out the governors guarantee a liberal annual payment from the asylum, otherwise Artesian wells will have to be sunk. This institution has the benefit at all times of an efficient Board from the number of resident gentry in the district.

We have at all times found its interior organization and professional management worthy of commendation.

CASTLEBAR ASYLUM.

The Castlebar Asylum though, comparatively speaking, of recent date, and enlarged in 1882, has latterly proved inadequate to the wants of Mayo, the largest county in Connaught. It only contains 364 beds, while the district has a population of 245,000, dispersed over an area of 1,360,000 acres. Its rateable valuation being limited to £316,000. The full current asylum expenditure last year was £6,892, and the portion paid by the district £3,219, at a rate of twopence farthing in the pound.

The Local Board, alive to the necessity of increasing the present accommodation, fully coincide with the Inspectors. The most effectual and economical mode of doing so is under the consideration of the Board of Control. The urgency is greater, as, strange to say, there is within the past few years an increase rather than diminution of inhabitants in the county. The farm around the institution, thirty-six acres, is too limited to afford constant employment, and the more so as in some seasons it is subject to partial overflows from an adjoining lake. The sanitary condition of the house has not been so favourable as could be desired for some months back, owing essentially to a want not only of a sleeping, but still more of an adequate day-room provision, to obviate which the resident physician has given every attention.

CLONMEL ASYLUM.

The Clonmel Asylum for the insane poor of the North and South Riding of the County Tipperary, comprises two distinct piles of building, separated from each other by a distance of nearly four hundred yards—one for male, the other for female patients exclusively. Up to the present there has been no pressure for an increased accommodation, but a new and detached Roman Catholic chapel of adequate dimensions is about being erected at a cost of £2,500, midway between both houses. There were 539 patients under treatment on the 31st of last December out of a district population of 199,000. The rateable valuation of the county at large is £680,776. The Treasury rate in aid for the year amounted to £5,186, leaving a local taxation of £5,701, equivalent to £11 7s. on a capitation scale, or eight farthings in the £. The asylum, commanding a wide view, is situated on the western outskirts of Clonmel; the farm grounds (27 acres) are bounded by the river Suir on the south. The institution is amply supplied with water from a large and old reservoir with natural springs in it, constructed early in the last century. Though the greater portion of the male division was originally a workhouse, from its spacious apartments, it is now well organized, and like the rest of the institution most satisfactorily worked.

The attendance of governors averaged eight at each meeting.

A notable fact in regard to the statistics of insanity is afforded in the Clonmel Asylum which was opened in 1834, after an expenditure on it of £17,000. It then afforded an accommodation for 60 inmates only, in a district population (Tipperary) of 420,000, being at the rate of one bed to meet the contingent requirements of 7,000 persons. Still for nearly two years the institution was not fully occupied. Since then not only structural additions but the purchase of an extensive building have been found necessary to meet growing requirements. The whole establishment now contains 539 inmates, out of a population of 185,421, or a bed to every 340 individuals, with an increased provision close at hand. No doubt sixty years ago insanity was recognised under a very different aspect from what now obtains. A lunatic in those days was commonly regarded as a person dangerous, difficult of management, and full of delusions, and should he commit a capital crime, would be held responsible for the deed, unless as the result of special delusions that led to it. Thus as punishment followed within fifty-six hours after sentence, the unfortunate culprit expiated his offence on the scaffold—Death anticipating inquiry; in minor transgressions the same responsibility existed, many of them now-a-days being regarded as incidental to and symptomatic only of mental derangement.

And here, perhaps, it may be fittingly observed that the more humane and liberal views latterly entertained of insanity, in its social bearings, have largely increased the population assumed to suffer from mental disorders, and with it a necessity to meet requirements. Hence in this and in all civilized countries the multiplication of lunatic asylums.

THE CORK ASYLUM

was erected in 1852 for the county and city, which at present has a general population between them of 496,000, of which 80,600 is resident in the borough, with a rateable property of £231,046, the valuation of the county being over a million a year. This institution, presenting the largest frontage (1,080 feet) of any edifice in Ireland, and built in a semi-Gothic style, was originally constructed for 500 inmates, but since then has had large additions made to it from time to time, the more recent of them being finished about six years ago. It is overcrowded by at least 80 beds, and still more so in regard to an ordinary day-room provision. The structure itself is placed on a rapid acclivity, which primarily necessitated deep cuttings, and as the available flat in the rear is already covered by two apartments of large dimensions—a dining-hall, 120 feet long by 90 in width, and a recreation hall of somewhat smaller size—no further additions ought, in our opinion, be undertaken, however requisite in other respects for the wants of the district—even were they feasible, bearing in mind the fact that the city has, owing to its vicinity, more than twice its legitimate proportion, it would not be equitable to entail on the more remote portions of the county an expenditure on buildings from which they would derive but scanty benefit, the city being essentially a gainer. The Poor Law Guardians of the borough are naturally desirous of an arrangement which would facilitate the removal of their imbecile and chronic insane from their union. Apart, however, from any outside consideration, the land attached to the asylum is ill-adapted and much too small for the proposed scheme. The asylum at large has been kept in excellent working order during the year, and the patients sedulously attended to. In some respects, however, we think it is open to improvements, particularly as regards furniture, increased ventilation, a variation of dietary, personal apparel, and a larger outdoor occupation. No doubt a good number of men are employed in the workshops, cleaning the house, and on the grounds generally, as well as of females in ordinary domestic duties and household avocations—knitting, dressmaking, crochet work, and the like. Amusements are liberally afforded, and an excellent band maintained; separate chapels for Protestants and Roman Catholics are becomingly and tastefully arranged. The full cost of current support in 1887 amounted to £16,424 on a daily average of 926 patients, being at the rate of £17 14s. 9d. per head. As the Government grant was £9,391, the levy on local taxation was reduced to a penny one-third in the pound, or on a capitation scale of maintenance to £7 6s. 9d. in the year, being less than that of an ordinary pauper in a workhouse. In a spirit of justice towards more distant divisions of the county, we could desire that in the event of a very probable, and by no means a not distant contingency, that any supplementary provision for the insane poor of the Cork district, should be made in the West Riding, and at the conjoint expense of the whole district.

DOWN ASYLUM.

The Down Asylum, limited to the county of the same name, has its normal provision for 420 patients nearly occupied. The inhabitants of the district are set down at present at 272,200, and its rateable annual valuation at £752,000. The institution is clearly too small for lunatic requirements, although from its outer magnitude and style of construction it seemingly affords a larger indoor or available space than it actually possesses. Since its opening in 1864, structural additions have been made to it for 120 beds, with ordinary adjuncts—day-rooms, corridors, and lavatories. Assuming, as already noted in the present report, that nearly three persons in every thousand of the population are mentally affected in the United Kingdom, it is evident that the Down Asylum is too restricted in accommodation. Fortunately, some ten years ago the original farm was enlarged by the purchase of an equal amount of land—both now extend to 110 acres, whereby not only an economy has resulted, and with it an ample supply of pure milk and other articles of domestic consumption, but means of constant occupation for the inmates have become available. On our various inspections the establishment, as reported by us, on the whole appeared to be very satisfactorily conducted, although admitting of improvements. The clothing of the patients was not on all occasions uniformly good, while the dietary, if contrasted with what generally obtains elsewhere, particularly in regard to animal food, was below par. Some of the day-rooms, too, are indifferently furnished. The total maintenance cost of the Down Asylum last year was £3,287, of which £3,851 being derived from the Government rate in aid a capitation levy on the county accrued of not quite three halfpence in the pound sterling. The utmost attention has been paid to the comforts and welfare of the patients by the Resident Physician.

ENNIS ASYLUM.

In the Ennis or County Clare Asylum, no structural alterations have been carried out by the Board of Control for many years, but in its interior organization manifold domestic changes and re-arrangements have taken place, tending not only to the comfort of the patients but adding to their accommodation. Passages have been retiled, ventilation increased, and the sewerage remodelled, while, by the modification of a few associated dormitories and single rooms, sleeping accommodation, much needed, has been secured.

The house all through is becomingly maintained and furnished. A considerable number of men are employed in agriculture. The farm of thirty-four arable acres supplies milk, vegetables, potatoes, and other esculents.

There has been a bakery in the establishment for many years—economical in its working and supplying the best bread.

The population of the Ennis or county of Clare district, is just now 141,500, and its valuation £317,184. The Asylum maintenance as chargeable to it in 1887, minus the usual Government allowance, was £4,000, or on a capitation scale £12 10s. per head, including the payment under the Statute of 18 lunatics in the adjoining workhouse, or about three pence in the pound. The institution at large is judiciously conducted and fully valued in the county.

ENNISCORTHY ASYLUM.

The County Wexford District Asylum, a large and imposing pile of buildings, one of the finest in Ireland, overhangs the river Slaney, close by the town of Enniscorthy; and is very centrally situated; as has happened in the case of other like institutions established even within the past thirty years, it was found after less than half the time to be insufficient, hence, on two occasions it has had to be enlarged, the last time being in 1882, it now has a total accommodation for 400 inmates.

In the early summer a dearth of water was felt. It increased gradually up to September, when great apprehensions were entertained as to the result. Fortunately, however, after various essays a new spring was discovered by the Resident Medical Superintendent, and at no great depth, in the neighbourhood; since when there has been a constant and full supply for all purposes.

The Asylum is in every way most creditably conducted the grounds around it well and ornamentally planted, there are 48 acres in the farm, which is principally under tillage.

The population of the district is estimated at 124,000, and the rateable valuation at £356,000. A sum of £7,156, of which £3,467 was a Government grant, and the difference, or £3,689, obtained from local taxation, was expended last year on maintenance, all incidental charges, as in other like institutions, being included. The capitation cost was thus reduced to £10 2s. 6d. on the county at large for the time being, or two pence farthing in the pound.

KILKENNY ASYLUM.

This establishment, erected in 1852, for the insane poor of the county and city, with a population between them of 100,263, contains 312 patients, and at present is all but occupied. The buildings, of a Gothic character and faced with cut stone, stand on an elevated site over the River Nore, being close to the town, and the grounds around them well planted, present a pleasing appearance.

The house generally is judiciously arranged, with well-ventilated corridors, dormitories, and day-rooms. It has been satisfactorily conducted, and the patients duly attended to professionally and otherwise in the past as in preceding years. The kitchen and laundry departments need some renovations, as well as other portions of the interior. Should fresh accommodation be required, as may soon be the case, it can be best effected by the erection of a detached infirmary, so as to leave the present structure altogether to the insane who are physically healthful. The rate per head chargeable on local taxation, after deducting the Government rate in aid, was five farthings in the pound on a rateable valuation of £375,828.

KILLARNEY ASYLUM.

The Killarney asylum belongs to the extensive County of Kerry, with, like Donegal in the North, a remarkably sparse population, and relatively to its size is of a very small annual valuation, still no institution in Ireland of the kind is more liberally administered to by its Local Board, or with a greater regard to the claims of the insane poor. The buildings from their position and style of construction are an imposing feature in the lake scenery. They afford an existing accommodation for 353 inmates—an enlargement for 100 more is being prepared by the Commissioners of Control on a resolution of the Governors. The current cost of maintenance amounted last year, on the general rateage of the district, £290,000, to threepence halfpenny in the pound for the full support of each lunatic inmate, who, as a body, proportionally to inhabitants at large, were as 1 to 560, irrespective of course, of the demented in workhouses.

The farm, thirty acres, is too small for the amount of male asylum residents, 220, and all of the agricultural community.

The newly projected structure is for women solely, and being on the verge of the grounds, unless more land is taken, they will be very poorly circumstanced in regard to means for outdoor exercise or amusement. We feel a difficulty in adding to expenses unless there be as here, in our opinion, a justifiable urgency. Looking to means as an end—and further as land is ever its own representative, and when fully cultivated through unpaid labour increases in valuation—we would strongly recommend an additional acquisition of from twelve to fourteen acres.

LETTERKENNY ASYLUM.

This asylum needs little comment. No change or enlargement of a structural nature has recently taken place in it since its erection. It belongs to a single county, the third as to size in this country, but with a poor and sparse population of 195,000, its annual rateable valuation is only £296,666. On the 31st December last the patients under treatment numbered 358; their capitation cost on the district was £11 1s. 7d., being thirteen shillings more than that administered to by the Treasury rate in aid, being, however, equivalent to threepence in the pound on local rates. Up to the present the institution has fairly met all requirements; no doubt, owing to the remoteness and comparative inaccessibility of many parts of the county from sixty to seventy miles distant, and the difficulty of pauper conveyance, some of them do not participate so fully as could be desired in its benefits. For the most part, through magisterial warrants, on the score of being dangerous, most applicants are admitted under a police escort. The establishment which is on a salubrious site, and far from devoid of architectural pretensions, has proved a great boon. It is adjacent to the principal but not the county town of Donegal. The patients are carefully attended to and made comfortable in every respect.

LIMERICK ASYLUM.

The Limerick District Asylum, originally intended for three counties—Limerick, Clare, and Kerry—then opened so far back as 1832 for the accommodation of 130 lunatics in a then population of over 800,000 inhabitants. It has now under treatment 494 patients out of 180,000 resident in the first-named county. Built within the city confines, it is restricted both as to its immediate structural area, and the outside extent of land, only thirty-five acres belonging to it, and which unfortunately cannot be increased, being hemmed in by public roads on two sides and a cemetery on the third. The institution, from additions made at different periods, accommodates 500 lunatics. The rateable valuation of the district is £532,737 a year, and the expenditure in 1887 was £11,917. Deducting from the latter £4,872, the local charge per head was £14 3s., or two pence three farthings in the pound. The establishment is now interiorly well furnished and in excellent order throughout. A new and well-devised bakery has been constructed, with larger and more commodious range of Turkish baths; the sewerage is materially improved, and repairs where needed effected—in fact, where improvements tending to the well-being of the lunatics could be made, they have not been overlooked by the Resident Physician.

LONDONDERRY ASYLUM.

This institution belongs to the city and county of the same name, one of the earliest constructions, being opened so far back as 1832, for the insane of the three counties of Derry, Tyrone, and Donegal, having collectively at that date 730,000 inhabitants, while the present district is limited to 165,000. It contains 385 patients. Unfortunately the original asylum was built on an ill-selected site of seven acres on the verge of the town. It has been added to from time to time, but not with satisfactory results—on the last occasion by a provision of 100 beds, contrary to our advice, but as the local authorities were so urgent and unyielding it was deemed advisable to accede to their wishes. Even now it is so much overcrowded that a fresh demand for fifty beds has been made and cannot be avoided. The best, however, has been done in existing circumstances in the working of the house by the Resident Physician. We are happy to add that its sanitary condition has, however, not been unfavourable, and the Board of Governors are anxious to minister to the welfare of the patients. The total cost of maintenance last year was £7,406 9s. 7d., deducting from which £3,525 12s. 10d. as the Government rate in aid, the local cost on the district may be set down to a little over two pence in the pound on a valuation of £385,000.

MARYBOROUGH ASYLUM.

The Maryboro' Asylum, owing to recent additions, is now equal to the wants of the King's and Queen's counties, its component district, and having between them 146,000 inhabitants. On the 31st of December last there were 352 patients under treatment in it, to whose support Government contributed during the year £3,088; the district itself, £3,000; the capitation cost on the latter was £10, not quite six farthings in the pound, on a rateable income of £504,369. The general accommodation as regards day-rooms and dormitories is adequate, but in some other respects there are noticeable deficiencies. There is no chapel or separate recreation room; the dining-hall is incongruously circumstanced, being too small for its object, and serving, with the aid of an annexe of limited size as a place of worship for two persuasions. A few of the male day-rooms, too, admit of a more homely supply of furniture. The interior organization of the establishment is otherwise most satisfactory, and every consideration is extended to the patients, who at all times are judiciously treated. There is a well-managed and productive farm of thirty-five acres attached to the asylum, but it is intersected by what appears to us a high and useless wall which detracts much from the openness of the site and its exhilarating influence on the many who, hopelessly insane, though intelligent on many subjects, are doomed to an unceasing residence within its precincts.

MONAGHAN ASYLUM.

The population of this district, composed of the county of the same name, and of Cavan, is estimated at 232,600, and its rateable income at £540,000. The asylum, including additions not as yet furnished, but otherwise completed, is calculated to afford provision for 520 inmates, being for 86 more than the present number under treatment, and which latter is considerably beyond a normal amount. The institution being on the block plan, is composed of detached buildings. A farm of thirty-eight acres surround them. As in various other asylums, a steady influx of patients, much greater than a diminution by discharges, necessitated the late enlargement. The cost of them, together with the outlay on alterations and new domestic requirements, especially as regard the laundry department, baths, water-closets, and sewerage, probably amount to £14,600. The maintenance expenditure, exclusive of the rate in aid, on the district was £4,800, or £10 ls. 10*d.* on a capitation scale, two pence in the pound.

MULLINGAR ASYLUM.

The Mullingar Asylum, appropriated to the three counties of Meath, Westmeath, and Longford, with a conjoint population of 220,500, and an annual valuation of £1,020,000, contained at the close of last year 567 patients, or 110 beyond its legitimate provision. Enlargement is consequently requisite, not only to meet actual, but in the future, more pressing wants. The best mode of doing so has been for some time discussed by the Board, but as yet without any definite conclusion: on being favoured with its views, the Commissioners of Control will take them into consideration, so that an immediate action may follow. The present buildings of cut stone for 300 inmates, constituting an imposing and handsome Gothic structure, were added some years back. A detached Roman Catholic chapel was erected in 1886. At present, not only personal provision in regard to dormitories, day-rooms, and their accessories should, in our opinion, be prepared to obviate an overcrowding, but interior arrangements of an administrative nature should be re-adjusted and increased. A laundry or kitchen, for example, at first limited to the use of from 300 to 340 persons, must clearly be too small for double the number; in like manner, store-rooms, bath-rooms, and all out-offices.

The farm proper comprises thirty-eight acres. Irrespective of produce consumed in 1887, that disposed of paid nearly £86. We think it should be of larger extent by from twenty to thirty acres, with a probable increase of patients from an essentially agricultural district, as well as for the object of opening out a greater space in rear of the infirmaries, gasometer, stables, laundry, yard, and offices generally.

The total cost of its lunatic maintenance last year was, on a capitation scale, £22 10s. 7d., a penny three farthings in the pound; deducting from which the Government rate in aid of £10 8s., £12 2s. 7d. devolved on local taxation, being about £2 a head more than were they inmates of a work-house. When dealing with the Belfast Asylum we adverted to the outlay incidental to the enlargement of asylums in this country. The present is an analogous instance—assuming the necessity of enlarging the asylum, and of doing so fully and not by halves, the latter, as a rule, dearer in the end, and all through unsatisfactory. Matters from our point of view thus stand. The valuation of the district, as already mentioned, is £1,020,000. Calculating the probably full expenditure on buildings and adjuncts, with the present undertaking for a water supply, the erection of a tower reservoir commanding the whole buildings, laundries, kitchens, refectories, hospital, &c., at £24,000, the repayment, with interest thereon, extended over twenty years, may be estimated at a farthing half-farthing in the pound. The limited accommodation afforded by the Mullingar Asylum having been brought before the House last Session, has induced us to enter somewhat largely into particulars, and at the same time trusting that for the benefit of the district at large our recommendations will be adopted.

OMAGH ASYLUM.

The Omagh Asylum belongs to an extensive territorial district, embracing the counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh, with a population of 282,000. In point of size it is one of the largest in Ireland. Originally constructed for 360 lunatic inmates, it affords an existing provision for 510, from additions in character with a peculiar style of its own. Still the accommodation is not sufficient to meet wants in regard to dormitories and day-rooms. The domestic offices, however, are ample, but the farm of forty cultivated acres does not afford an adequate out-door occupation to the large agricultural community in the establishment. The Governors, at our suggestion, propose purchasing about thirty-five adjoining acres of reclaimable ground. In a sanitary point of view the asylum has been satisfactorily circumstanced during the past year. The sewerage is now good, and the supply of water fairly abundant even in the driest weather. The current expenditure, which here, as elsewhere, includes all items of outlay, save the payment of necessary advances on buildings, amounted to £8,851 in the past year, one of the lowest comparatively in this country, being a penny one-fifth in the pound, as levied on local rates, and an estimated income of £678,000.

RICHMOND ASYLUM.

The Richmond or Metropolitan Asylum, presented as a gift in 1832 by the Government of the day to a district now comprising the city of Dublin and the counties of Louth, Dublin and Wicklow, with an accommodation of 240 beds, was then valued at £64,000. It has since been enlarged at various dates, and on each occasion with an additional purchase of land; the present estate embraces fifty-four acres adjoining the north-western suburbs of the city. The Institution, containing 1,176-patients, is overthronged by nearly 100, with monthly admissions in excess of discharges, and so much so that some new provision is obviously needed. The existing accommodation would be sufficient for its normal population in regard to area and general requirements, such as hospitals, infirmaries, chapels, and refectories, but day-rooms, and apartments for the staff are from day to day becoming more pressing, and should speedily occupy the consideration of the Board.

For a considerable time dysentery and some other incidental or, as they are designated, zymotic affections, being prevalent, large sanitary operations have been recently undertaken, and the sewerage, not only within and immediately around the buildings, but through a considerable portion of the grounds and adjoining conduits is in process of renovation or repair by direction of the Board of Control. The cost thereof is not unlikely to reach from eight to nine thousand pounds, no doubt a heavy impost, but one entailed by the recognized demands of society on the score of public sanitation. "Salus populi suprema Lex." With reference to a future provision for the insane poor of a large metropolitan district if carried out in a regular asylum mode a large outlay would be entailed. Having already expressed our views on the subject we need not reiterate them, or dwell on the economy of a result which would not practically detract from the comforts of the imbecile and hopelessly demented.

The current expenditure of the Richmond Asylum in the past year amounted to £27,751 10s. 5d., Government contributed to it £10,902 8s. The capitation cost per head on the district at large (certain incidental receipts subtracted) was as near as possible £13. Being on its total rateable property (£1,968,000) a tax of seven farthings in the pound, but in respect to city patients one of about 3½d. This excess being mainly incidental to its metropolitan position, and, as proportionally obtains in all large English towns, from a continuous influx of strangers, the destitute abstracting to a certain extent the pecuniary benefits derived from a sojourn in them of the wealthy. The Dangerous Lunacy Act further operates unfavourably in Irish county towns. Taking, however, the inhabitants of the district at large into account, there are not quite two patients in the asylum to the thousand of the outside population.

The Board of Governors, which meets fortnightly at the Richmond, instead of monthly as elsewhere, often too, at much personal inconvenience, devotes great attention to its welfare. It is needless to add what has so frequently been reported by us, that in its various details the institution is conducted with a scrupulous regard to the treatment, comfort, and general well-being of its inmates.

SLIGO ASYLUM.

The Sligo Asylum at the close of 1887 contained 418 patients—226 chargeable to the county itself and 192 to Leitrim. It is now fully occupied. The population of the district is 202,000, and its rateable valuation £350,000. The buildings, of considerable extent, are of cut limestone, and present an imposing appearance from their position, and are surrounded by large open farms mainly bounded by hedgerows, and which from affording constant occupation to the inmates, have proved highly productive. The Government grant with local taxation to meet all annual items of expenditure amounted to £8,422, being equivalent to a capitation cost of £19 6s. 2d., or as regards local taxation of about 2½d. in the pound. The accommodation for officers is inconvenient and limited; the best mode of obviating deficiencies is under consideration, and whether it might not be advisable to convert a portion of it to general use as day-room and dormitories by the erection of a detached house for the Resident Physician, as well as of a chapel, the latter being much too small.

The Institution at large is otherwise in a satisfactory condition and the patients well and judiciously treated.

WATERFORD ASYLUM.

The Waterford District Asylum, on the 1st of January, in the present year, contained 322 patients, a small excess over its normal complement, but which will be speedily obviated by structural additions for thirty beds at the male side. In every other respect the institution is well circumstanced, and conducted in a most satisfactory manner. The interior arrangements are judiciously devised. A large number of the inmates are industriously occupied, both indoors and on the grounds, which afford sixteen arable acres for cultivation. The population of the county and city amounts to 113,000, and the rateable property to £317,000 a year, the current expenditure of the institution in 1887 being £6,015 17s.; it was relatively to district property seven farthings in the pound on a capitation scale of the 322 inmates under treatment during twelve months. In no asylum in Ireland is more attention bestowed on the comfort and amusement of its inmates than in the Waterford.

DUNDRUM CRIMINAL ASYLUM.

Having in recent Parliamentary Reports entered fully into the general working of this Institution, on the present occasion we shall mainly confine ourselves to its statistical bearings during the past twelvemonth.

On the 31st December, 1886, the number of inmates confined in it amounted to 172—139 males and 33 females. In the subsequent year the above total was reduced by the discharge of 17 men and 4 women, and by the death, from natural causes, of 5 individuals, as well as by the escape of a male patient. On the other hand, there were within the same period, 24 admissions, 21 males, 3 females; hence there were three less under treatment, or a total of 169 on the 31st December, 1887.

Of the discharged, 1 male and 2 females were set at liberty on the termination of their penal servitude; while 15—2 being females, were transmitted to their native district asylums, to be there entered as ordinary patients, they, having conducted themselves previously at Dundrum inoffensively, and, in many instances, usefully. By this arrangement in the way of liberation, as well as by a careful selection of cases submitted to our consideration for admission, whether before or subsequent to trial, we have been enabled to obviate an overcrowding at the Asylum without any detriment to the service. Fully one-half, probably nearer two-thirds, of the lunatics charged with offences, in the exercise of a discretionary power accorded to us, we have relegated in the past year to their proper district hospitals for treatment, whereby a saving to the Treasury of more than eight hundred pounds has resulted.

Of the actual admissions adverted to, 11 were indicted for murder, and acquitted on the plea of insanity, and 5, after trial, from becoming mentally affected.

On the first of the present year there were in confinement 83 homicides, 75 males and 13 females; 33 males and 3 females charged for the most part with violent assaults; 18 men and 9 women indicted for robberies with violence; 2 men and 1 woman for arson, the remainder of the 169 in confinement, or 12 males and 3 females had committed minor offences, but being known to have evinced dangerous propensities, we considered Dundrum the most suitable place for their detention.

Among the admissions was a convict who escaped nearly three years ago from the Asylum, and who, in the interval, lived in various parts of England, differently employed, until he was casually discovered in the Mitcham Poorhouse. At all times very uncertain and eccentric, he still may be regarded as dubiously insane, and from his antecedents, a fit subject for some further detention.

The only untoward occurrence we have to record in the past twelvemonth was an escape effected by a convalescent and unsuspected patient in Christmas week; he was recaptured but not sufficiently soon to have his name re-entered on the current annual records of 1887. The mode, however, in which he managed to avoid discovery suggested to us the feasibility of supplying by costume a continuous and inexpensive safeguard against a like occurrence, so a contract has been since made with a manufacturer of Irish frieze for a special article having red stripes woven into the texture, with trousers in character. The coat may be thrown aside, but the loss of the latter would be rather inconvenient to a fugitive, while no pauper, however sparse his garments, would be disposed to make an exchange. We anticipate good results from the device. The more so as it has not met with much approval from the inmates.

With the condition and general management of the Asylum we have reason to be satisfied, not simply on report, but from constant personal observations, afforded through visits much more frequent than monthly. The patients appear to be carefully and kindly looked after, and the attendants mindful of their respective duties. Their dietary is good and ample. The grounds are on the whole well cultivated (although occasionally some patients refuse to work) and productive, with a full supply of ordinary vegetables, and also from home-fed cattle with a reasonable quantity of milk and butter.

In a sanitary point of view the institution has been particularly favoured, the mortality in it being little more than $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., or about 30 under that in the community at large.

With reference to personal accommodation, the female divisions are far from being fully occupied, but those at the male side are so overcrowded as to interfere with classification, than which nothing is more requisite in an institution for the insane, but above all others in one where patients after recovery are indefinitely detained, and even for life. As it is, the Resident Physician, after a long experience, unceasingly complains of the serious difficulties caused by the detention of some few inmates, who from time to time are remitted to his care from convict prisons. Becoming disorderly and ill-conducted in them, setting discipline and even punishment at defiance, strange in language and demeanour, they are certified to be insane, and as such transferred to the asylum. Scarcely in it when they become contented, amenable, and even useful. After a time, however, they get tired of the change, remonstrate at an association with lunatics, demanding a return to gaol, where payment is given for labour. Sent back, however, they revert to their former convict procedure, with a repetition of its results. Besides the above there are genuine malingerers from the start, mostly discharged soldiers, who, themselves perverse from dissipation, or other causes, not unfrequently from a residence in tropical climates, instigate others to insubordination.

The commixture of such persons, though few, with the residents of a criminal asylum, many of whom are quite alive to their own unfortunate position, and to the fact that for serious offences, committed when deprived of reason, they are still liable after its restoration to an unceasing confinement, cannot but act detrimentally on the unhappy individuals themselves, and be a source of commiseration to those who witness their despondency.

Before concluding the present section of our report we would, recommend the construction of an annex at the western side of the main buildings, with a dormitory provision for sixteen beds, and a day room of proportionate dimensions. In the event of such an addition, the existing bath and watercloset system on the ground floor could be re-arranged, or, better, re-modelled. It certainly admits of improvement.

Complaints from neighbouring residents in regard to the overflow sewage from the asylum are becoming so urgent that the Commissioners of Public Works, anxious to avoid litigation, and at the same time effect a desirable object, have plans under consideration that appear to us serviceable to the asylum itself.

The report of the resident physician to the asylum, at all times most zealous in the discharge of his very onerous duties, will be found, as heretofore, with other documents in the Appendix.

POOR HOUSES.

The mentally affected in these institutions of both sexes from infancy to the most advanced ages, amounted on the 31st of November, 1887, to 3,961—of them 1,565 were males, and 2,395 females. This aggregate exceeds that of the preceding year at the same date by 120 individuals. It would be erroneous, however, to regard the preceding total as being composed of lunatics in the ordinary acceptation of the term, the larger proportion of them, or 2,183, belonging rather to the epileptic and idiotic classes, a considerable portion of whom were imbecile from birth, or being in early life affected by some type of insanity, in the progress of time became idiotic. Nevertheless, the community just adverted to being more allied from their antecedents with the inmates of establishments for the insane, should, and generally do obtain in public estimation more sympathy from their personally unprotected condition than every-day paupers who are free to act and move as they think fit.

In our official capacity the visitation of workhouses is included similarly as is that of the English Commissioners, but from their number, 162, not within specified times. Still we are enabled to state that from year to year an amelioration takes place as a rule in the condition of the insane generally in union workhouses, and that they continue to be objects of kindly consideration, especially in regard to a better scale of dietary, and in some, where numerous, they not only have paid attendants, but, if able to work, are industriously occupied.

Were an average to be taken, each poorhouse would have about five-and-twenty patients in them out of the 3,961 already adverted to; but it so happens that in a few there are not more than three or four, while in others there may be from fifteen to thirty, and in some from 100 to 500, as in Cork, Belfast, Limerick, and Dublin unions, &c. In large towns the epileptic and demented ingredient proportionately to population would seem to predominate.

It occasionally happens on our inspection of the idiot wards, as they are called for the most part in union workhouses, that cases present themselves which admit of a better treatment from their acuteness or other reasons, in a district asylum, such we have transmitted to the latter. On the other hand, not unfrequently, inmates are recognised by us, who, hopelessly demented, but quiet and aged, had been sent from an asylum. Strange to say such transfers appear not to be discontented at the change, probably from being less under a regulated system, and thus able to revert to their earlier habits of life; perhaps, too, from mixing less with persons in their own condition, and more with ordinary paupers.

The mortality of the insane classes in poor houses last year was found on inquiry to be very moderate.

Before concluding our remarks on the insane in union workhouses, it may be well to observe, that under the statute 38 & 39 Vic., cap. 67, there are three lunatics removed from the Derry district asylums and paid for out of its funds in the Limavady Workhouse, 13 similarly in the Ennis, transferred from the adjoining asylum, and 87 in the Ballymena, removed from the Belfast Asylum to ease an over pressure of lunatics in it. In a recent report we adverted to our intention to make inquiry into the number of idiots and epileptics at large, which, comparatively with the past, we apprehend to be very few, but are not in a position to afford sufficient details on the present occasion.

PRIVATE ASYLUMS.

With reference to these institutions, twenty-three in number, it may be stated that little or no change has occurred in regard to their operation or the respective amount of patients in them during the past and preceding year. A difference of twenty-three inmates only has to be recorded, there being 602 under treatment at the close of 1886, and 625 of 1887.

Exclusive of the following, which in part are supported by voluntary contributions, namely, St. Patrick's or Swift's Hospital, the Retreat, belonging to the Society of Friends, the Stewart Institution, and St. Vincent's, conducted by a community of nuns, the remaining nineteen come under the more immediate denominations of "Licensed Houses," their proprietors or owners paying annually a fixed sum into the Treasury on a capitation scale, which last year amounted to £186.

Private asylums in this country, for the most part creditably conducted, are suitable abodes for patients in the better classes of society, while some few from the lowness of stipend on which they are maintained continue to afford but an inferior accommodation, nevertheless one that in the absence of a better provision cannot be dispensed with. No doubt, to a certain extent, lunatics are admissible into district asylums in accordance with Rules in Council, but not to the exclusion of pauper applicants. Individuals so admitted, contributing from £10 to £20 a year for their support, it being on the ordinary scale of dietary and other domestic items as afforded to non-paying patients. There exists, however, an intermediate stratum of society unfavourably circumstanced, one between the better and more affluent and the operative industrious, and general agricultural community, in respect to which the benefit of a judicious treatment in the earlier stages of insanity is denied to a large extent, and particularly at a time when most likely to prove successful. Even among the wealthiest, it is regrettable that the growing indications of a diseased mind are disregarded, not unfrequently from a mistaken delicacy, as if Insanity was not what it essentially is, a simple manifestation of some functional derangement of a physical nature or the result of an overworked intellect.

Returning to the more direct subject of private asylums, at the present date we have nothing particular to dwell on in their details of management during the past twelvemonth. Admissions have been duly authorized, and no persons have been detained in them after a fair time had elapsed to be guided by symptoms or signs of recovery, which, in some instances, it must be confessed, are calculated to deceive the most cautious observer. There is a reasoning power and a plausibility among the educated insane, living, as it were, within their own thoughts, and with the single object in view of appearing sane, well calculated to baffle special inquiry. Hence, through an ordinary every-day intercourse, and in unguarded moments, it often happens that mental weakness is easiest discernible, and, in many instances, had simple precautions been taken on its primary indications, either by wayward conduct or a groundless melancholy, dangerous and oftentimes fatal results would have been avoided. We advert to this subject, as more than one case in connexion with it has come latterly under our consideration.

During the past twelvemonth 187 patients—85 males, 102 females, were received into private asylums, constituting, with their previous residents, a total of 789 under treatment, of which between both sexes, 55 were discharged as cured, and 49 improved to a greater or less degree; 44 died, none escaped; there thus remained on the 31st December, 1887, 239 males and 386 females. The deaths were all from natural causes, and at once reported to the Inspectors.

Contrasting cures, both with admissions and the aggregate treated, they stand in a favourable light comparatively with what has been already noted in regard to public institutions. In the first instance being two per cent. higher; and, in the second, the mortality, too, bears a favourable comparison as between both. No accident of a serious character occurred in the period now being dealt with.

On analysing the causes of insanity as leading to asylum confinement, a noticeable difference obtains between public and private institutions on the score of inebriety, and the frequent infraction of social duties consequent therefrom. Comparatively very few, save urgent cases of delirium tremens, are sent to district asylums from an uncontrollable indulgence in fermented or "spirituous liquors," its results, as a rule, being subject to magisterial inquiry and punishment. In the better classes such dissipation leads to "a private licensed asylum," as causing a total abandonment of family and social duties, accompanied too often with a senseless depravity, especially and still more unfortunately among females. It is difficult how to act in such contingencies—between confinement on the one part, and, on the other, a freedom to be probably followed by similar excesses.

If the natural feelings and domestic happiness of families be worthy of consideration, individuals, unmindful of their position in life, and who cannot, from an unbroken intemperance, control their own conduct, may be well subjected, even for their own personal benefit, to certain periods of detention. But still, as every picture has its reverse, we cannot but sympathise with not a few residents in private asylums, who, unvisited and uncared for by relatives, complain bitterly of their neglect. Within the precincts of a licensed establishment for the insane, the "Wounded stag" would find a fellow-sufferer, from the false idea that mental disease, to which the most intellectual are liable, just as the strongest to bodily affections, should be deemed a family discredit. But unhappily such is too often the case.

Most respectfully submitting to your Excellency the foregoing report on the general state of the Lunacy Department, as placed under our supervision, and referring to the varied tables to be found in the appendices for information in detail

We have the honour to subscribe ourselves,

Your Excellency's obedient servants,

JOHN NUGENT.

GEO. W. HATCHELL.

APPENDIX B.

CENTRAL ASYLUM FOR CRIMINAL LUNATICS AT DUNDRUM.

No. 1.—Return showing the Original and Present Asylum Accommodation.

Asylum,	Central.
Year opened,	1850	Original Accommodation, . .	M. 80	F. 40	T. 120
Year enlarged,	1864 & 1867	Present Accommodation,* . .	128	43	170

Actual Number of Inmates on 31st December, 1887, M. 140 F. 29 T. 169

* The present accommodation as given above is calculated by allowing as nearly as possible about 600 cubic feet per bed. The accommodation as given for the male side includes the two hospital dormitories which were, until recently, wholly allocated to male patients. The actual numbers on the male side are a good deal in excess of the calculated accommodation.

No. 2.—Admissions, Discharges, and Deaths, &c., during the Year ended 31st December, 1887.

APPENDIX G.

CENTRAL ASYLUM, DUNDRUM.

REPORT for the YEAR ended 31st December, 1887.

Central Asylum, Dundrum,
14th May, 1888.

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honour to lay before you my report for the year ended 31st December, 1887, with the statistical tables for the same period, and the financial tables for the year ended 31st March, 1888, the latter being, however, subject to any queries that may arise on the part of the Auditor-General. I am happy to be able to report that the asylum continues to maintain its low rate of mortality, there having been only five deaths during the course of the year, or a mortality of 2·5 per cent. on the total number resident. The average age at death was fifty-six years. One death was due to cancer of the face; the others were due to congestive or inflammatory diseases of the lungs, a class of disorder to which the enfeebled vitality of the insane appears to render them peculiarly liable.

The numerical increase of the staff on the male side continues to prove satisfactory, affording much relief to the constant strain that formerly used to make itself so much felt.

As regards the female side, His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant and the Lords of the Treasury were pleased during the past year to take into consideration, on your recommendation, the representation I made to them, as referred to in my report of last year, regarding the difficulties which presented themselves in the female departments of work owing to the disproportion in numbers between the female inmates and the male. An addition of three female assistants, principally intended to aid in the laundry department, was accordingly made to the staff, and this arrangement has worked satisfactorily and with much relief to the house. The completion of six special cells, with two small exercise yards attached, for very refractory cases on the male side, has also proved of much value, enabling seclusion from the rest of the inmates to be adopted without depriving the violent patient of air and exercise.

Most of the supplies sent in by the contractors during the year were of fair average quality. I find it necessary, however, to maintain the strictest and most constant personal watch over this department in order to maintain a proper standard.

The conduct of the staff has been very good during the year. The only changes have been the resignation of two of the temporary male attendants.

One escape was effected at the close of the year, the particulars of which were immediately communicated to your office. The patient, as you are aware, was shortly afterwards recaptured.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

ISAAC ASHE, M.D., T.C.D.,

Resident Physician and Governor.

The Inspectors of Lunatics, Dublin Castle.

NOTES ON CASES ADMITTED DURING THE YEAR 1887.

MALES.

Reg. No. 736.—J. M., aged 40. Admitted 8th January. Tried for rape at Dundalk Assizes in March, 1884. Sentenced to 10 years penal servitude. On admission into Mountjoy Convict Prison was considered evidently deficient in intellect and in mental development, but did fairly well until the end of 1886, when he became mentally much disturbed, shouting in his cell, violent, and given to commit dangerous and unprovoked assaults; sleeping little, but bodily health otherwise good. Certified as insane on 3rd January, 1887, and admitted here on 8th January.

737.—J. B., aged 45. A pensioner, as sergeant, from the R.I.C., having been discharged from the force in consequence of symptoms of melancholia. Subsequently he attempted to murder his wife by shooting at her. Tried at Green-street Commission, and found incapable of pleading. Admitted here accordingly under warrant during the Lord Lieutenant's pleasure, on 9th March.

738.—T. B. B., aged 36. This is the same case as No 725 (1886), having merely been sent for trial to Galway Assizes, where he was found to have been insane at the time he committed the murder with which he was charged, that of his wife, and remitted here accordingly during the Lord Lieutenant's pleasure.

739.—J. O'H., aged 53. A shoemaker by trade. Tried at Belfast Quarter Sessions in October, 1882, for larceny, after previous conviction for felony. Sentenced to 5 years penal servitude, and 3 years police supervision. While undergoing sentence in Maryborough Prison was found to be falling into senile insanity, being noisy and incoherent, refusing food, and having to be fed with the stomach pump. Having been certified as insane accordingly in March, 1887, he was transferred here on the 2nd April. He was noisy and incoherent in language throughout most of his stay here, but improved considerably in intelligence towards the end of it. His sentence having expired he was transferred to Belfast Asylum under Warrant of the Lord Lieutenant on 31st October.

740.—M. N., aged 42. Farmer. Tried at Wicklow Winter Assizes, for manslaughter, in December, 1882, and sentenced to 20 years penal servitude. He is stated to have been good, quiet, and well-disposed up to the time of his mind becoming affected while undergoing his sentence in Downpatrick Convict Prison in 1886. In October of that year he began to suffer from religious mania, refused his food, and had to be fed with the stomach pump. He subsequently seemed almost to recover, but in March, 1887, became maniacal and violent; and having been certified as insane accordingly, was transmitted here on the 5th April.

741.—J. S., aged 34. A farmer by calling. A convict on licence at the time of committing his present offence, viz., sacrilege. Tried at Cork Winter Assizes in December, 1881, and sentenced to 5 years penal servitude for violent assault and wounding. Having been released on 26th October, 1885, previous to expiration of sentence, he forfeited his ticket of leave by his subsequent crime, and was sentenced at Naas Assizes on 5th March, 1886, to a further period of 12 months imprisonment. Having been removed at the expiration of this term to Mountjoy Convict Prison, to undergo the remainder of his previous sentence he shortly thereafter began to exhibit symptoms of insanity, refusing food, and being affected with homicidal mania and suicidal melancholia at the same time; sleeping little and having to be fed with a stomach pump. Certified as insane on the 15th April, he was removed here on the 20th and behaved quietly during the remainder of his sentence, showing signs rather of hypochondriasis than melancholia; on the termination of his sentence he was removed to the Ennis District Asylum, 15th February, 1888.

142.—B. O., aged 31. Farmer. Previously in an asylum at Birmingham; always a bad character with a record of several previous convictions. Tried at Sligo Assizes in July, 1883, for assaulting a dwelling-house and sentenced to 10 years penal servitude. On his admission to Mountjoy Convict Prison he appears at first to have feigned insanity, but subsequently resumed normal behaviour. More than three years afterwards, viz., in April, 1887, he became really insane, and is reported as maniacal, restless, violent, and filthy in habits and language; sleeping and eating little. Having been certified accordingly he was admitted here on the 26th April.

743.—R. F., aged 53. Gardener. Indicted at the Circuit Court, Glasgow, 13th September, 1883, for murder, he having, during a voyage from America, fatally stabbed one of the ship's stewards, being under the delusion that he was persecuted by Fenians. He labours under the monomania of persecution. Found to be incapable of pleading, and ordered to be detained in the General Prison, Perth, during Her Majesty's pleasure. Transmitted to Dandrum under Warrant of the Home Secretary, dated 20th April, 1887, and admitted here on the 29th April.

744.—P. D., aged 37. Baker. This was a re-admission, having been previously entered at No. 635. He had effected his escape on 11th November, 1884, and had been for some time in Mitcham Workhouse, Surrey, under no suspicion of insanity. Having left the workhouse, and been exposed to much hardship, in consequence, his mind appears to have become somewhat affected again, and he was re-captured in London. He was in a wretched condition when re-admitted, but a few days of good food and comfort here restored him to apparent sanity again. His original offence was larceny with violence, for which he was tried at Green-street Commission on 28th October, 1881, and sentenced to 14 years penal servitude, with 445 days unexpired of a former sentence for burglary.

745.—P. M'G., aged 61. A pauper. Pleading guilty to a charge of violent assault, at the City of Dublin Sessions, on the 11th July, 1887, and was sentenced to 12 months hard labour. He was, however, presently seen to be a dangerous lunatic, certified accordingly on the 15th July, and admitted on the 19th. His insanity had been suspected by the Recorder during the trial. The assault was committed with a hatchet.

746. J. D., aged 50 years. Tried at Nenagh Assizes on 12th July, 1887, for the murder of his wife; found guilty but insane. Admitted here accordingly from Limerick Prison on 28th July. This prisoner is certified to have been in Clonmel Asylum for 10½ months, but to have been discharged as cured in March, 1887. His offence was committed about six weeks after his discharge.

749. M. R., aged 45. Tried at Summer Assizes, 1887, in Waterford, for murder of his wife; acquitted on ground of insanity. Admitted 24th August, 1887, under an Inspector's order.

750. J. B., aged 27. Labourer. Tried for burglary at City of Dublin Quarter Sessions, April, 1887. Sentenced to five years penal servitude. First exhibited symptoms of insanity in August, while undergoing sentence in Mountjoy Prison; shouting and using obscene language, and attempting self mutilation. Sleeping and eating little. Stated by a comrade to have been liable to periodical attacks of religious mania while at large. A habitual criminal. Admitted accordingly under the Lord Lieutenant's warrant on 25th August.

761. W. D., aged 38. Labourer. Tried at Sligo Winter Assizes, December, 1886, for wounding his wife. Sentenced to five years' penal servitude. After reception into Mountjoy Prison was observed to become gradually moody and melancholy. Under the delusion that he was justified in committing his crime. Certified insane 29th August, 1887, and admitted accordingly 26th August.

752. J. G., aged 25. Labourer. Tried at Castlebar in July, 1879, for rape, and sentenced to ten years' penal servitude. First showed signs of insanity in September, 1887, while undergoing his sentence in Mountjoy Prison. Became, silent, moody, and subsequently suspicious and distrustful; labouring under delusions of poisoning and that his life is to be taken; eating and sleeping little. Certified as insane on the 9th September, and admitted here on the 14th.

754. M. S., 38. Labourer. Convicted of manslaughter at Mullingar Assizes in July, 1875, and sentenced to penal servitude for life. Became insane while undergoing sentence in Downpatrick Prison in September, 1887. Reported as suffering from melancholia, hypochondriasis, delusions that his food is poisoned, and imaginary complaints; also as being of bad character, excitable, perverso, and stubborn. Admitted 22nd September, and has fully justified above character since his admission.

755. J. B., aged 29. Harness maker. Convicted of larceny at Kilmainham Quarter Sessions, in October, 1881, and sentenced to five years penal servitude. Previously convicted eleven times for felonies, larcenies, &c. Released on licence in September, 1885. Re-convicted at Dublin City Sessions in November, 1885. Re-committed on former sentence in November, 1886. Certified as having become insane, excited in manner, and incoherent in language, in November, 1887. Admitted here accordingly on the 23rd November, and transmitted to the Richmond Asylum on the termination of his sentence on the 29th November.

756. J. C., aged 57. Baker. Tried for murder at Belfast Assizes in December, 1887. Found guilty but insane. Stated to have exhibited no symptoms of insanity during the few days he was in Belfast Prison. There is, however, no doubt in my mind that the jury took the correct view of the case. He was admitted under warrant of the Lord Lieutenant on the 16th December.

757. J. M., aged 50. Labourer. Tried for murder at Belfast Assizes in December, 1887. Found guilty but insane. Stated, like the previous case, to have exhibited no symptoms of insanity while in Belfast Prison, but none the less obviously insane. Admitted under warrant of the Lord Lieutenant on the 16th December.

758. J. H., aged 31. Saddler. Tried for murder at the Belfast Assizes in December, 1887. Found guilty but insane, and transmitted here under warrant of the Lord Lieutenant on 22nd December. This was a painful and remarkable case, which created great excitement in the country; the prisoner, who had been some time previously in his county asylum, and had been discharged as recovered, having run amuck where he lived, and killed four persons. On admission here he appeared to be a quiet, respectable man, and has been well-conducted ever since. He is undoubtedly one of those cases of recurrent mania from which, when they are at large, society is ever in danger, but which often are perfectly quiet and well-disposed while under the restraints of an asylum.

759. J. W., aged 50. Carpenter. Indicted at the Belfast Assizes in December, 1887, for attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a knife. Found guilty, but insane. Admitted under warrant of the Lord Lieutenant on 22nd December. This prisoner died in January, 1888, from disease of the stomach.

FEMALES.

747. M. R., age not stated. Tried for manslaughter at Galway Assizes, July, 1887, and ordered to be detained as a criminal lunatic. Admitted accordingly on 30th July.

748. E. J., aged 40. Married. Infanticide. Reported as affected with religious mania and sleeplessness. Admitted under Inspector's letter of instructions on 3rd August, 1887, from Downpatrick Asylum. No further information.

753. M. F., aged 63. Widow. Tried at Cork Quarter Sessions in April, 1885, for larceny. Sentenced to seven years penal servitude. Reported, while undergoing sentence in Grangegorman Prison, as affected with gradually increasing dementia, noisy and talkative. Admitted on 21st September, 1887, under Lord Lieutenant's warrant.
